Mayor McCarthy as Chorister.

A few minutes before the clock struck 11, President Dunlop rapped with his knuckles upon the table and called the body to order. He introduced Rev. Dr. McFaden, who invoked the divine blessing.

At the conclusion of the prayer, Mayor McCarthy stepped to the front of the platform and made his first appearance in Richmond in the role of a chorister. Said he: "My friends, you will observe printed upon the program which you hold in your hand the maional hymn, 'America.' If any of you can singe and you will ry to follow me, I will try to start it off for you." With these introductory remarks the Mayor cleared his throat and waving the printed program back and forth once or, twice after the manner of Mayor cleared his throat and waving the printed program back and forth once or twice, after the manner of Professor Mercer with his baton, proceeded to sing "America" as loudly and as patriotically as any New England chorister. There were some good voices in the convention, among both men and women, and the Mayor was well followed, the national hymn being splendidly rendered.

The president's short address was received with much applause.

Mayor Also Speaks.

Mayor McCarthy was then introduced. He cordally walcomed the convention to this city. It gave him special pleasure, he declared, to welcome to historic Richmond two bodies, one representing the energy and push of the South, and the other the enterprise of the North. Richmond is the proper place for such a joint convention to assemble, for it has always been a great yneeting place for great conventions. To-day at 1 o'clock the ladies of the convention will be given a frolley trip to the Country Club, where they will be entertained. This is with the compilments of the manufacturers of Richmond.

To-night the convention will attend an entertainment by Polk Miller; this, with the compilments of the bardware folbers of Richmond.

Thursday evening, beginning at 730, the annual busquet will be served at the Jefferson.

Friday the conventions will go to Norfolk, have a sail around the harbor, finally landley at the Expotion Grounds, where several hours will be spent and the return to Richmond will be necomplished by 0 o'clock P. M., when the final adjournment will be a meer matter of form.

After rendering of this report the convention adjourned for the morning.

Afternoon Session.

In the afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, both associations held sessions, and it developed that they meant just what they said when they announced in the morning that these would be strictly secret meetings. The sessions were held, not in the convention hall, but in other rooms of the Jefferson. The painters are yet at work in and about the convention hall, and there was too much openness about the large room to insure the strict "exceutiveness" which the programs and the rules of the associations call for. The business transacted by the two associations in exceutive sessions was similar in scope. Each first heard and considered the report of its president, and these were very secret documents, telling of the inside workings both associations, the very things they do not want the public to know anything about. Other important reports considered and discussed at more or less length in speeches limited 4-7 five minutes were those submitted by the "grievance committee," the executive committee, and so on. All these reports treated of secret matters, and discussed how best to maintain prices, how to regulate saids and how to stick to the "regulations" when made, how to manage credits and discounts, how to secure from the railroads cheaper freight rates, how to make agreements, one among the other to prevent oo much price cutting and how best to secure cast-iron observance of those agreements. All these things are secret, and the public will never know whether the Southern Hardware Jobbers' Association and the American Hardware Manufacturers' Association work these matters in the same way the bings called trusts work them or have a patented method of their own.

The social features of last night were simply a renewal of the mingling together in the lobby and in the pothers of the Jefferson, and down in the lobby some of the "drummer boys" in the bounch got in some pretty good work.

Program for To-Day,

This meeting will not be devoted to bushness, but the entire time will be given ever to addresses.

The public are cordinly invited to attend this meeting, and the business men of Richmond will be on hand in good force, for they will doubtless hear something interesting; for instance, the first address will be by President W. W. Finley, 47 the Southern Railroad Question as Viewed by a Railroad Procident."
